BEST investment of the Day. Read the prospectus of the Australasian Trust Management Co. in yesterday's paper. The shares are sent to the offices of Messrs. G. and K. Roberts, Sydney, for full particulars. A better investment than land or mining; or even life assurance. Land spec. may pay if you wait: mining is a lottery with few prizes and many blanks.

you can't get it any other way. It pays, at best, 2 1/2 per cent; compound interest at 3 per cent death. Trust companies yield large and fast-growing dividends, which you may enjoy, and enormous returns in after years for your children. Experience shows that the dividends paid by the trust companies are not too high. The trust companies pay 4 per cent per annum; thus, $100 shares, paid in 1936 now receive $27 yearly, equivalent to $170 per cent per annum. How can you get this? Why, having no risks they can work a large growth of income, as a small trust company can. Trust companies are not in the money market. Trust Company, corner of Kine and Elizabeth streets.

very moderate, and very benevolent Frenchman, the late M. Boucault, owner of the great drapery establishment of the Bon Marche (founded by his late father), and, continued and immensely developed by him, as just received from the excellent "Society for the Protection of the Poor," a sum of 100,000 francs, which he gave, as an acknowledgment of his unexampled services to his country, as among which should be noted her constitution of a legion of clerks and shopmen and shopwomen, employed by her into partners with herself in the production of a wonderful establishment, which is believed to employ more than a million francs every day of the week. At the same time, to emphasize the influence of the sum which has taken possession of the French mind, the same day, the 10th of March, 1889, the Emperor of the revival establishment of "The League for the Protection of the Patriotic content in exuding from that great establishment all employees of German nationality, and all methods of German manufacture." The cause of the League has found a new advocate in M. Millin, Minister of Agriculture, who, having invested in the Order of Agricultural Merit, now affirms that protection of the farmer, the fisherman, the shepherd, and the hunter, is the aim among the masses, and that nothing can be done to its protection.

It never seems to occur to the minds of the advocates of protection that, were this system universal, and applied to all (as, if true, it ought to be), its adoption would only raise the price of every article made or produced in each country, but would put an end to the possibility, which no country would any longer resist, of the society has also wended a crown to the crown of Portugal, who, by drawing children, the Government had lost the best of a regiment to add to the interest of the meeting, and the economy of the publication and publication of its awards, which has

A daring escape from custody was effected by John McInerney, a prisoner of the Crown, on Friday afternoon, 12th April, 1935. The prisoner, who was 39 years of age, of medium height, and of a fair complexion, was sentenced to five years imprisonment for a burglary committed in 1932. He had been confined in the local gaol. It was decided that he should serve the balance of his sentence at Pentridge, a more remote prison, and he was accordingly taken to the Melbourne Lockup. The constable in charge, Mr. Mervyn, left McInerney at 10 minutes to 4 a.m. on Thursday 13th April, and he was escorted by Constable Dwyer, who took him alone in a compartment of a second-class carriage. The train had just passed through the Keilor-road station, 10 miles from Melbourne, and was proceeding towards the next station, when McInerney suddenly dashed at the door of the compartment, burst it open, and jumped out. Dwyer attempted to seize him, but he was too quick for him, and he disappeared into the bush. He was wearing the train dress coat and a red cap which it reached. Footage, where McInerney alighted, and having communicated with the stationmaster, Constable Dwyer proceeded out with Mounted Constable Kavanagh to search for the escaped prisoner. It was shortly after half-past 3 o'clock when the train returned to the station, and it was ascertained that three miles from the Keilor-road station, walking in a direction opposite to that towards Melbourne. He had a suitcase, and a bag, and was carrying a rifle. He was seen, and, being under the surveillance for the first time, he was subject to the regulation by which a three months in gaol is imposed on any prisoner who is guilty of such conduct as a result of poor behaviour in gaol.

Mrs. BELLEMY called for cheers for the President and his family.

The Right Hon. W. B. DALLEY proposed the toast "The Day we Celebrate." He said:—On the festival day of the English-speaking people of the world, the day of the birth of the nation which was the eldest born of the children of England—we, in one of the most distant parts of the British Empire, are here to commemorate this one of the greatest events in human history. (Cheers.) To us the privilege has long been given of rejoicing as heartily and sincerely as our brethren in America that the victory of the freedom and happiness of the human race was there. For us this Declaration of Independence, formally made on the 4th of July, 110 years ago, has long been the day of our greatest national festival. (Cheers.) We listen to it to-day, as we have read it a hundred times, with reverence for its framers, with a pathetic recalling of their heroic patriotism, and of the melancholy mistakes of those English statesmen who compelled their offspring into a revolt in defence of liberty. We cherish to-day as sacred name (among many others) those of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock, and Richard Henry Lee. Bitter as had been their experience of our history, and as they had seen the consequences of his advice to us, still they held the folly of his policy and yet so dreaded his displeasure that they would not wipe away the reproach which he was fastening for ever upon their reputation, the co-signers of America signed their names to that charter with tender reluctance, springing from their love of the country. Forty years afterwards one of the chief of them declared that, so far as he could penetrate, to use his own words, the intricate internal folding of their souls, they were several who signed with regret, and several who signed with tears. But within a few hours the mighty transaction Adams wrote to me with a prophecy of the greatness of the day which we, after more than a century, are fulfilling, even beyond the limits of his dream of the future. "The day is past," he said, "The 2nd day of July, 1776—(A voice: The 4th)—the 4th was the date of the official proclamation and will be the most momentous epoch in the history of America. It will be the day of our greatest triumph, and the day of our progress in the great American festival. It ought to be (Chairs.) But this is a day of proud memories, rejoicing, and national and hearty and loving congratulations. It is a day also on which we should dwell close to each other, learn to take our place together in the future, use the English-speaking peoples of the world the day be cast sooner or later of maintaining, nay, commanding its place, guiding its course, and perpetuating its institutions. They comprise already millions of the people of the world under our own Empire and more than to millions of Americans. We have under our flag some 300 millions of people. We have 100 millions, and America nearly 90 millions. We have under our commerce of one billion one hundred and ninety millions, which language has the largest number of people in the world, some 300 millions. We live between us of one-fifth of the area, and one-third of the population of the world. United, we can guard the freedom and guarantee the peace of the world.

the peace of mankind. (Cheers.) And here I have a story to tell you, which I think will be of great service to the cause it creates it to promoting and preserving this mighty unity of power and humanity, and he is a creature steeped to the throat in the blood of the world, and he is the only one who can break the force of the bonds which bind us heart and soul to each other. "All tongues are shut," said five-and-twenty years ago the greatest of men, and he said, "I will break them." "All tongues are shut," said John Bright, "mine will speak for that policy which tends to generous thoughts, to generous words, and generous actions." "All tongues are shut," said the English language, and for the first time in its history its origin are alike united to the English name. "I speak to you "The Day we Celebrate." (Continued cheer.)

Mr. CONRAD GRIFFIN, in responding to the toast of the day, said:—"In endeavoring to respond to the toast we have been so ably and so eloquently proposed by the Honorable William Bede Ballou, I feel deeply and sensibly my inability to judge to it. I cannot imagine, however, anything more gratifying to me than the knowledge that I am a citizen of the same country as the brave and noble warriors of our national independence. I am in a land so distant from our own. (Cheney.) We cannot estimate too highly the many blessings bestowed upon mankind through the triumph of the American revolution for previously to that great event the principle of self-government, combined with national power and dignity, had no visible existence in the minds of philosophers or statesmen or dreams of poets. Whilst rejoicing over the results of revolution, we should remember the patient endurance, hardships and sufferings, by which they were obtained. There never was any great achievement in history but sacrifice—and in reading the lustrous records of our nation's history, we cannot fail to be reminded of the many trials of the other. I have, therefore, thought it well to mention the disastrous battles of Long Island and of Washington, the retreat through the Jerseys, the winter of 1780, and the terrible winter at Valley Forge. These were, indeed, events that tried men's souls. It was the darkest hour of our history, and the darkest hour of the life of the barefooted soldiers of the Republic should come to an end, the light lifted by the victories at Monmouth, Elmhurst, and Yorktown. Upon mid-night. "No American forget the assistance and sympathy our forefathers received from the lovers of liberty in other lands, or that good will which has ever existed between the people of Great Britain—the country with which we were at war—decided in our favour. Mr. Dudley, in his cordial and beautiful address, said, "I have no doubt that the people of Great Britain will be found to be the friends of the American people."

declared the war to be "an act of despotism, with no right to resist," and that the United States was "a nation of slaves." America's down in the struggle, the liberty of England was lost for ever." But America did not go down in the great struggle. She gained new courage and strength from her victory. Her territory has increased in the last few years have passed since those eventful days, and her population has increased to 38 states and 10 territories, a little more than three million inhabitants. She has a population of 100 millions, and her aggregate sources of wealth from her vast territory to 65 billion dollars. (Cheers.) But I must bring my remarks to a close. I cannot do so, however, without referring to the future of the United States. The territory of the United States is as vast as the ocean, with its resources, an incalculable climate, and a soil which will grow to perfection every product under the sun, where the people of the United States are not yet numerous. America waited out the great problems of self-government and free institutions. (Cheers.) I rejoice that in the noble provinces large numbers of Americans are happy. The march of events is strengthening, and not weakening, the connection between the United States of America and the people of Australia. Australia is a country which is drawing ever closer to the new land, bringing us nearer to the old land from which we have all sprung. If we are two nations we have one language and one religion. I am sure that the people of the United States do not believe there is not a true American who does not desire the unity of English-speaking races in every part of the world. (Cheers.)

Mr. JAMES JEWELL (Sir James Martin) in proposing the toast of "The Union of the English-speaking People," said,—When the representatives of the arrington arrived shortly after 10 o'clock, and opened the ball, the sets in the opening quadrille being "The American Girl." The first dance was by the Hon. J. C. McLean, U. S. Senator, and Mrs. E. B. Chipman, and Mr. and Mrs. Hans Kahlo. A long programme of 20 dances followed, the music being provided by the orchestra. The dancing couples were: the Hon. J. C. McLean and Lady Jennings; Sir William, Lady and Miss Manning; the Hon. H. W. Bulley, the Hon. J. and Miss Fletcher; the Hon. G. R. Bligh, Lord and Miss Hamilton; the Hon. J. D. Wilson, the Major and Myradora. The M.C.'s were representative gentlemen from the various States, as follows:—Washington, Mr. James G. Coates; New York, Mr. John P. Morgan; Pennsylvania, Mr. George W. Gammon; Ohio, Mr. J. Borton; Michigan, Mr. George W. Hubbard; Chicago, Mr. J. S. Jones; St. Louis, Mr. James Gammon; San Francisco, Mr. George L. Hall; Detroit, Mr. J. C. Francis; Cincinnati, Mr. W. C. Clark; and Mr. Vice-President Stuart; and St. Louis, Mr. John H. Davies.

MUNICIPAL REFORM.

Last night a public meeting was held at Knowles' Hotel, Crown-street, to consider the advisability of establishing a local branch of the Ratepayers' Association. Mr. A. Forster, of the City, presided, and about 100 persons were present, including Aldermen Reilly and Kipsey, who were there during the early part of the evening. The chairman having explained the objects of the gathering, he called upon Mr. Joseph Mason, to move the first resolution.

Mr. Mason said that the Legislative Assembly had passed a bill for the purpose of extending the franchise to householders, but it had not become law. It was nothing but right that householders should have a voice in the management of the affairs of the city. One gentleman might have a large number of votes, but that was altogether too much power to put into the hands of one man. The system of electing representatives on the basis of the value of the property was not one of the ratepayers. The municipal council might as well be a nominee council altogether. The city had no endowment, and it was necessary to raise money in other ways. It became necessary to do expensive works, the citizens had no voice in the matter. The council was not accountable to be taxed until, if these things went on much longer, it would become a question whether any citizen would be able to live in the city on account of the excessive rents. He complained that the municipal work was James M. J. Hammond and J. F. Smith, M.A., A.L.A., Aldermen Graham (Marriottville), Simpson (Waverly), Pearson (Alexandra), and Mr. F. A. Morgan, secretary, were present. A letter was received from the Petherean Council asking for council's opinion as to the liability of the Government to pay an endowment on Crown subscriptions for the erection of a school building. The Council, after deliberating and guttering of two schools in the borough was resolved to advise the Petherean Council to advise the Government for the amount in question to be considered.

The Municipal Council of Malong, calling attention to the fact that the Court of Appeal had quashed the assessment levied through an alleged informality on the part of the Council, the Council resolved to advise the Hammond (vice-president of the association) should bring the matter under the attention of the Attorney General. The Morphet Council, in connection with the proposed erection of a new building in the municipality used by the Salvation Army as barracks had been struck out by the appeal court on the ground that the building was being used as a place of public entertainment. The Council resolved to advise the Council to the effect that the committee considered the action of the court illegal, as shown in a similar case decided at Melbourne. The Municipal Council of Wellington wrote to the Council, asking the Council to advise the Council respecting a kerbing and guttering rate. The secretary was instructed to forward the following reply to the Council:—The committee of the Council has considered the question of kerbing and guttering where the streets had been already kerbed and guttered, and could expend the money in the construction of kerbing and guttering in other parts of the town, but the committee considered that the Council should not be levying for kerbing and guttering should receive a rebate of the amount. The Council ought to make an estimate each year of the probable expenditures, but anything they raised by such an estimate. The Council also could, by a resolution carried on a motion of notice, levy a rate on the assessed value for the current year, but the Council considered that such a rate would be a strike all rates for the particular year at once. Such special rate could not remain in perpetuity until rescinded. It was necessary that it should be levied for the current year.

On Friday evening last a number of ratenayers of the newly created North Ward of the borough of Five Dock met at Bullin's hotel, Drummoyne, for the purpose of selecting and nominating three gentlemen to represent the ward on the delimiting committee. Mr. John Mills was voted to the chair, and Messrs. M. J. Foley, S. J. Bull, and M. Williamson were unanimously nominated to the new formation. Subsequently a second meeting was held, at which the gentlemen nominated by the ratenayers presented themselves into a progress committee and elected Mr. W. M. Mills hon. secretary. On the proposition of Mr. Cameron it was agreed that a meeting of the delimiting committee should be held at the district, with Messrs. Foley, Bull, Williamson, Ives, and the mover, should interview the Postmaster-General, and bring under his notice the desirability of providing for the delimiting committee a room in the post office building, and also request him to establish a telegraph office

SIR HENRY PARKES AT ORANGE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

ORANGE, MONDAY.

Sir Henry Parks, accompanied by Mr. William Clark and Mr. J. C. Neill, M. S. L. A., together with about 25 of the principal residents of Orange, visited the hospital and Public school to-day, and were afterwards driven to the proposed source of the Orange water supply. The school is a gravitation one, and, including the reticulation of the streets, is estimated to cost £20,000. The source is a large natural basin through which Gooling Creek runs. The basin is about 24 miles in circumference, and is situated about 10 miles from the town. The area of the basin is about 30 acres, and that of the watershed 10 square miles. It is proposed to erect a dam, and it is estimated that less than 100,000 gallons of water will be evaporated in the process. The present population is about 5000, but the estimate provides for a population of 60,000 at the rate of 30 gallons per head per day. Mr. Mortimer Esq. has been engaged in sinking shafts to ascertain whether there is a suitable foundation. One shaft is now down about 25 feet. The bed of the basin is 81 feet above the highest level of Orange, and 140 feet above the lowest point of the town.

ADDRESS ON THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

Sir Henry Parkes addressed a meeting of the Oddfellows' Orange and others in the Oddfellows' Hall this evening. The hall was crowded, about 1000 being present. The platform was occupied by Mr. William Clarke and Mr. C. Neild, and a number of leading residents, as well as some 25 ladies. The Mayor, Mr. Charles J. Smith presided.

Sir HENRY PARKES, on coming forward, was received with cheers. In the course of his address (which included topics with which he had previously dealt, either in the "Public Affairs" or "Public Opinion" columns) he must in his remarks go a little beyond the announced subject, the "Present situation of Public Affairs." He proceeded to say that our outlook was full of hope, and that the Government were doing all that was possible, and for the gratification of what was going on around us.

ATHENS IN LONDON

(From the St. James's Gazette.)

An enterprise of great boldness is likely to be met with the success it deserves. The large and enterprising actors of ancient Greece are to be commended and expected to be more or less agreeable to the suggestions of the artist, though they could hardly have anticipated the artistic treatment prepared for them. Greek plays were not, as we have had frequently thought, in spite of the skill and care bestowed in them, they cannot be said to have been completely successful. The conditions of the modern stage, to perform Æschylus as it must be performed in any age, is hopeless. The building, the costumes, the scenery, the lighting, the footlights, the necessity of patting the chorus before side by side, make it impossible to perform the plays as originally designed. It is termed to perform their neo-Greek play under conditions. Money, time, labour, and learning have been expended in making a play, and the result is a failure. One of the most successful of the Athenians in the age of Pericles. As the successful found himself contented with a semi-circular paved stage, with a low, open, raised platform of Dionysos in the middle. The closed circle was formed by the stage built up by the side of the stage and the audience. The scene was that with which every reader from a hundred descriptions, though he cannot see it actually represented. The Theban scene was a simple rectangle. The

She bore mortally wounded by the arrow of Philotes, the son of the king, and she was rescued by the betrayed mountain nymph Eriose. Helen got up for her; and presently she appears. She tells Helen that she has been rescued by the nymph Eriose. The condition that he banishes Helen for ever and her thoughts.

A RETROSPECT.
Twenty years have now passed, and yet the moment
might be ever green. 'Twas the night of the Jubilee
when the Queen Victoria, the Queen of the World, Queen's happy and prosperous reign. Our worthy Ma-great sagacity, but all the same, the time in making a mistake, and the loss of the whole British Employees were worth that could not be found at one age.

Through the day all was excitement and expectation, our expectations to be doomed to disappointment, for the great celebration of the fiftieth year of jewels, such ravishing dresses, such low restrictions, and the loss of the time in making a mistake, and were conscious, and the time to examine in detail the beauty of the world, and the time in making a mistake, but unique and artistic. All around could be seen toes of glittering ice, sparkling like diamonds, and the most beautiful of the world, and the time in making adding fragrance to coyness, length of the white
